GATHERED FACTS Capt. Albert Maxfield of New York, who served with the Eleventh Maine regiment in the Civil war, was taken prisoner near Appointation and made to surrender his sword. Not long ago a Bangor paper received a letter from John Davis Arbuckle of Lewisburg, W. Va., stating he had a sword which he had taken from a Yankee officer at Appomattox. Captain Maxfield saw the letter, communicated with the writer and is now in receipt of his sword and an invitation to visit his former enemy. A. A. Derrah and his wife of Perkins, the smallest town in Maine, were elected to five offices at the annual town meeting. Mr. Derrah was chosen town clerk, constable, auditor and truant officer, while Mrs. Derrah was elected to the school committee.

SUPPLY OF SEALS ASSURED

Action by United States, It is Belleved, Has Done Away With All Danger of Their Extinction.

For the first time in the history of the United States this country is handling its own sealskins, a condition that should have been brought about long ago, but was not, largely owing to trade secrets connected with the dressing and dyeing of the furs, which were possessed exclusively in Eng-

Seal furs are used more extensively In America than in any other country on the globe and the United States government has done more to prevent seals from becoming extinct than all the other nations put together. It is due entirely to our initiative that there is now a growing supply of seals from which to draw. The total number in the Alaskan herd is now estimated at 300,000, and It is believed that 100,000 will be added this summer, after which, under moderate regulation, there will be little danger of extinction, such as faced the fur-bearing seals only a few years ago.
